MORE MONESSEN CASES TRIED IN COURT YESTERDAY.

Town Getting Worsted at Every Turn.—Colored Villain Who Shot Down White Man Got Only Six Months in Jail.

There seems little use for Monessen to take a case into the Westmoreland county court and expect to get justice. A case was tried yesterday where a colored man deliberately shot down a white man on a public thoroughfare in presence of dozens of spectators and the verdict given was "six months in jail."

This was a cold blooded attempt at murder and the court found Champ the villian who made the attempt guilty of agravated assault and battery and sent him over for six months.

John Hambrick plead guilty to a charge of illegal liquor selling. He was fined $5.00 and costs and six months to jail.

Charles Goldsmith charged by R S. Kelly with larceny plead guilty and was fined $5 00 and costs and six months to jail.

Frank Sutor and Andy Feryan plead guilty to carrying concealed weapons and were fined $10.00 and costs each.

In the case of M. P. Neves charged by John Mack with malicious mischief the prosecutor, who did not appear was assessed the costs.

The case of W. A. Hutchinson Food Inspector against W. H. Rodgers was decided in favor of the prosecutor.

In the trial in the case of W. H. Kemp charged with horse stealing, the defendant concluded to enter a plea to the charge of receiving stolen property. This plea was accepted by the Commonwealth. Kemp was charged with having stolen a valuable horse from Andy Bergman of Rostraver township on the afternoon of July 15. The horse was subsequently found in the possession of Kemp at Homestead, but the orginal theft could not be traced to the defendant.

Good Show Tonight.

Frank Laypo, America's premier trick comedy acrobat, is another big drawing card with the Donnelly & Hatfield Magnificent Minstrels booked to appear at Monessen Opera House, tonight, under the personal direction of Al. G. Field's. Introducing a whirlwind of novel surprises in the acrobatic art Laypo concludes his act with a sensational dare devil, death defying dive from the dizzy apex of a spiral tower, reaching far up into the "flies" of the stage. The feat is a crowning climax to a wonderful series of acrobatic feats, combining the grotesque with grace and daring.

A Few of the Social Events Which Transpired in the City Last Evening.

The home of Rev. and Mrs. J. R. Mouer on Reed avenue, presented a lively scene last evening, the event being a surprise party in honor of the nineteenth birthday of their son, T. Blair. The gathering was a most merry one and a very pleasant evening was spent.

Those present were the Misses Coriene Arnold, Rose Meyers, Sadie Cadwallader, Anna Miller, Mary and Blanche Brightwell, Emma Todd, Grace and Ida Reeder, Ida Kibler, Sarah Mouer, Maggie and Gertrude Davis, Bessie Plants, Maud Forster, Bertha Nale; Messrs. A little half grown pup of the poodle variety was the innocent cause of an exciting scrap between two youngsters about nine years of age this afternoon, the features of which were extremely amusing. The lads were separated, their stories heard and then a compromise effected by one taking the rope and the other the pup.

BIG PICNIC AT ATHLETIC PARK TODAY.

Employes of City Office and Pittsburg Steel Company Enjoyed Hospitality of Superintendent Nash

A special train over the P. & L. E. railroad arrived in Monessen today at 11 o'clock bearing about two hundred people representing the Pittsburg office of the Pittsburg Steel company. The train stopped opposite the mill office, where the party was met by Supt. Nash, the employes of the local office and a delegation of friends. A grand march was started for the big works and at the entrance to the offices the familiar sign "welcome" greeted the vison of the visitors.

After viewing the plant and watching for a brief time the Rod mill in operation the guests were all invited to the park grounds to partake of a banquet spread to the Queen's taste. Fan long rows of tables were waiting under canvass spread with edibles of which all guests partook freely.

Two hundred and forty guests sat down at the first table and the second table was well filled. After dinner various amusements were indulged in, the younger sect returning to the Cabinet shop where dancing was in order, others pitched ball and indulged in various athletic sports until 2 o'clock when the two offices were called to take part in the annual base ball contest.

Supt Nash and W. C Reitz were Captains and the best material available was selected. As we go to press the game is still on and the spirit of enthusiasm is rife and it will be hard to tell who will be the winner, Monessen or Pittsburg.

A supper will be given this evening at 7:30 and the special will then leave for Pittsburg.

Sale Still Continues.

One of the most successful sales ever conducted in this city has been the great slaughter sale at the Max Mansbach clothing establishment. All week the entire force of clerks have been busy serving the bargain seekers, and today's sales promise to be larger than ever. The low prices which are prevailing at this sale promises to soon clear the shelves of hundreds of dollars worth of merchandise.

A Webster girl who had been told that rubbing a raw onion on the head would keep the hair from falling out, tried it the other night after supper. When her beau came to call an hour later and asked her where she got such a strong breath, she indignantly ordered him to leave. ROOSEVELT IS ALERT

President Keenly Interested In Political Situation In Pennsylvania.

WANTS BIG REPUBLICAN VICTORY

His Visit to the York County Fair Will Not Be Simply to See the Prize Cattle.

[Special Correspondence.]

Harrisburg, Aug. 23.

"President Roosevelt is not going to the York county fair simply to see the prize bulls, you can depend upon that," remarked a well-informed Washington correspondent a few days ago in discussing the president's anticipated visit to Pennsylvania next month. This newspaper man is in touch with members of the cabinet and other leading officials of the national administration, and he knows the keen interest the president and all of those associated with him are manifesting in the coming election.

While it is possible that at the dedication of the new capitol building here the president may not touch upon politics, there is reason to believe that in his remarks subsequently at the York county fair he will make clear his desire for the election of a Republican congress.

It is known that the president has made a number of inquiries regarding political conditions in Pennsylvania, and he has on more than one occasion expressed an earnest wish for the success of the Republican party in this state this fall.

President Roosevelt has taken advantage of several opportunities recently to arouse interest in the Republican cause.

Mr. Roosevelt's Dollar.

Anent his subscription to the Republican congressional committee's campaign fund, Editor Earle C. Tuten, of the Bellefonte Republican, has this to say about "Mr. Roosevelt's dollar":

"One of the first to heed the call of the chairman of the Republican campaign committee for one dollar contributions to the campaign fund is President Roosevelt. The president believes in the virtue of example and gives his dollar early with an implied injunction to all Republicans who share with him a true spirit of loyalty to party principle to go and do likewise. Undoubtedly the president's example will bear fruit. Its special value consists in the fact that every public act of the chief executive of the nation commands the attention of the whole people, and that accordingly his recognition of the dollar a head idea will bring the merit thereof home to hundreds of thousands of citizens who otherwise might let it pass unnoticed.

He Leads the Way.

"Naturally this simple device commends itself to the president because of the conditions which have made it necessary. In former times the great corporations were the chief donors of campaign funds, and very little money was obtained from the privates in the ranks of the political parties. Largely through Mr. Roosevelt's instrumentality, a death blow has been dealt to the practice of collecting funds from such sources.

"Henceforward, therefore, the campaign committee of all parties must look to individuals for the wherewithal to meet the heavy cost of campaigning. There should be no difficulty on this head if it is only possible to enlist individual attention and to inspire generally an adequate sense of partisan obligation. It is this that Mr. Roosevelt has in mind, and he has taken the one method of emphasizing his views where good results are sure to be achieved."

A State Dollar Fund.

Colonel Wesley R. Andrews, of the Republican state committee, has followed the lead of Chairman Sherman, of the congressional committee, and is soliciting one dollar subscriptions to the state campaign fund. The radical anti-corporation declarations made in the Republican platform in Pennsylvania, coupled with the knowledge that Edwin S. Stuart as governor will see that all the party pledges are carried out, will without doubt deter many capitalists from contributing to the Pennsylvania Republican state committee this year.

But this is to be "a people's battle," and the dollars of the people will bring returns in a triumphant Republican victory.

Fortunately, the Republican party has cleaned its household and has placed itself in the van of reform legislation, thus giving no valid excuse for any Republican to desert the Republican ranks. If Emery stands for a principle, Stuart likewise stands for it, and Stuart, furthermore, has the advantage of representing the Republicanism of Theodore Roosevelt.

Common sense is going to win the coming battle in Pennsylvania, not hysteria, and when the people begin to see, as they will, that Stuart is a Republican who owes allegiance only to that which is best in Republicanism and not to individuals, that he is a Republican who stands shoulder to shoulder with Roosevelt for the Square Deal, they will discover only danger in the movement for Emery.

The Sachem of Pokanoket.

The sachem of Pokanoket, best known in the history of New England as King Philip, was the fourth son of Chief Massasoit. His Indian name was Pometacom, but his father was friendly to the English colonists, who gave him the name of Philip. His warfare upon the settlers came fifty years after the first landing of the pilgrims at Plymouth Rock harassed them greatly, but Philip was at last killed at Mount Hope, and the war thus ended. The title of Mount Hope, coupled hereby with his English name, was the Indian title of sachem would have done.

Welsh English.

The following note received is from a Welsh person: "Dear sir, I am in receipt of your favour of the 7th inst., and in reply to same beg to state that I am in a position to supply you with moderate chair at good reasonable with ready cash for the same and treat it fair. The nearest lot of the surrounding mountains has gone this place well down and praise I still have yours, N. B. The landlord is spoken English very much."

The Siege of Lisbon.

When Lisbon was besieged by the Spanish in the fifteenth century such Portuguese as were captured were maimed. Their eyes were put out, their noses, lips or ears were cut off, their fingers nails or the ears amputated, and in this miserable plight they were sent back into the city with the announcement that when it was taken all the defenders would be similarly treated.

Refused the King.

Henry VIII. had six wives. The most extraordinary exhibition was displayed by the fair sex in general to obtain the dangerous distinction of being his consort. The fortunate alone is ignorant of his success with a refusal but that was on the part of a witty Duchess of Milan, who replied to his offer that she considered she had but one head and could not afford to lose it.

Real Mortification.

"George kissed me last night," she said, "and I'm so mortified that I hardly know what to do."

"Why, do you regret kissing before you are engaged as a rule?"

"No, but in my surprise I forgot to make a pretense of fighting him off for a while."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Giving Him Hope.

The pretty girl was lavishing a wealth of affection on her mastiff, and the very soft young man was watching her.

"I wish I were a dog," he said, languishingly.

"Don't you worry," she replied. "You'll grow."—London Tit-Bits.

Neither evidence nor common sense nor reason has the slightest effect upon prejudices.—Goethe

Rolling on a Barrel.

The public in general and life savers in particular should be warned of the danger and folly of rolling on a barrel the bodies of apparently drowned persons. This process has never yet helped to resuscitate, though it has undoubtedly killed many half drowned persons. The idea that it "pumps out" the water is entirely fallacious. In the first place, no water enters the lungs of a drowned man till he has been absolutely dead for many hours. In the second, the removal of water from the stomach is quite a secondary consideration compared with the importance of re-establishing the action of heart and lungs, and rolling a body on a barrel is about the surest way of preventing both heart and lungs from resuming their normal functions. Artificial expansion and contraction of the chest by alternately stretching the arms above the head and compressing the chest with them is the correct first aid to the apparently drowned, but never can rolling on a barrel be anything but deleterious.—New York Times.

Pretty Thin Coffee.

During one of George Graham Vest's campaign tours in the early nineties it was necessary for him to sojourn over night in the town of St. Charles. The best hostelry the place afforded was poor enough, and at breakfast Vest was especially put out by the stuff that was placed before him for coffee. After having sampled the beverage Vest, with a frown, called for the proprietor. When that individual appeared the senator asked, with a wave of his hand toward the offending pitcher and smoking innocently before him, "Sir, what is this stuff?" "Coffee," meekly replied the proprietor, somewhat taken aback. "Coffee!" repeated Vest in fine scorn. "My friend, I could insert a coffee bean in my mouth, dive into the Missouri river, swim to the town of Alton, Ill., and I'll guarantee that one could hail up much better coffee than this, sir, over the entire route!"

BRYAN AND EMERY

They Are Linked Together In the Pennsylvania Campaign.

PLAYING NATIONAL POLITICS

Republicans Are Prepared to Meet the Issue With Roosevelt and Stuart As Their Leaders.

[Special Correspondence.]

Philadelphia, Aug. 28.

The home-coming of Bryan this week brings national politics to the front all over the country, and especially in Pennsylvania, where the democratic state convention which named Emery for governor in its platform declared Bryan the certain successor to Roosevelt.

There is now a clean-cut issue whether Roosevelt or Bryan shall be indorsed by the voters of Pennsylvania this fall.

Republicans For Reform.

It is the argument of the democrats and of the so-called Lincoln Party, which has been swallowed by the Democrats, that only local issues are involved. They claim—the Democrats and the Lincolnites—that they alone can give good government. Yet, if we take into consideration the work of the recent session of the special legislature, we find that every reform demanded by the most drastic reformer was adopted. In other words, the Republican party gave direct proof that it was not only willing but anxious to lead the movement for political reform and political regeneration.

The platform of the Republican party and the candidates in person stand for the purest and the most advanced ideas. The Republican state platform is linked with that of the Republican party of the nation. To separate the two is impossible. When you vote for Stuart you vote for the indorsement of the policies of Theodore Roosevelt. When you vote for Emery you give aid and sustenance to the supporters of William J. Bryan.

In plain words, we are going to decide in November whether we are Roosevelt Republicans or Bryan Democrats.

There will be those who will declare that their support of Emery is not an indorsement of Bryan. But it will be, just the same.

The situation is one of deep interest and it is useless to deny that it is also one of concern. Two years before the nominating convention will be held, Bryan is as good as nominated already. State after state has declared for him through Democratic state conventions. During the past week two more states fell into line. Wisconsin went wild over his name and indorsed him outright as the standard bearer of 1908. Pennsylvania Democrats went on record in practically the same manner, for they hailed him as the great "Democratic commoner, who is now regarded as the certain successor of Theodore Roosevelt."

To drive the wedge in Pennsylvania the Bryan leadership has joined hands with the Lincolnites by taking the candidate of the latter for governor.

Opening Mass Meeting.

Philadelphia Republicans are deeply interested in what will probably be the initial meeting of the state campaign. It will be given in the Academy of Music in this city on Wednesday evening, September 12. The meeting is to be held in connection with an immense demonstration to be given under the auspices of friends and neighbors of Mr. Stuart in the southern section of the city. Leading businessmen and manufacturers are working with the Republican clubmen to make this occasion a grand success. It is predicted that there will be the largest turnout of Republican clubs ever made in that section of the city, and that the Academy of Music will not be large enough to hold the thousands who will join in this tribute to one of the most popular Philadelphians ever named for public office.

Stuart's Personal Strength.

There are new evidences given daily of the admitted strength of the Republican nominee for governor.

The Philadelphia Evening Bulletin, an independent newspaper which supported Berry and the entire fusion ticket last fall, says:

"The nomination of Edwin S. Stuart for governor places at the head of the Republican state ticket a clean, upright and respected member of the party. It would not have been possible to find among the regular Republicans any other man of reputation who enjoys more of the good will of the people of Philadelphia than the ex-mayor, and this good will extends in large measure into the state.

"Throughout his career he has been associated with no scandals or abuses of his making or his sanction either in official life or in party management; his personal character is high, and his instincts as a citizen and as a party man are in the direction of honest politics and good government. His administration as mayor of Philadelphia was one of the two best under the Bullitt act, and in every public or semi-public post to which he has been summoned, his tact, sense and integrity have enabled him to be useful and successful.

"There is no doubt that Stuart is in entire sympathy with the strong platform on which he has been nominated and that if elected governor he may be depended upon to carry it out in the purposes of his administration.

"Stuart today is unquestionably stronger than his party, or rather the party organization behind him."

When the Votes Tied

By CLAUDE PAURARES

Copyright, 1906, by W. R. Caldwell

It was an off year in politics that is, it was a bad year for the politicians. The electors had taken the bit in their teeth and run away, and the cut and dried nominees had failed to become candidates. It was because of this that Abe Hewson had been elected to the legislature from one of the mountain districts. When his friends and neighbors had talked of nominating him he had replied:

"Shoo! Why, I hain't got no eddecashun!"

"Don't you reckon you need any to be an honest man."

"But I can't make no speech."

"The less gab the better. Been too much talk already."

"But them eddecated critters will git me all tangled up."

"Nobody can't tangle up a square man."

Abe Hewson was nominated and elected. He didn't have to pay out a shilling for campaign expenses, and he didn't make any promises. They knew him throughout his district as an honest man. They said of him as they said of a January coonskin—that was "prime."

His wife was not puffed up with pride over his nomination. She had little to say during the campaign. It was only when he came home and told her that he was elected that she mentioned him to sit down and then said:

"Abe Hewson, nobody could dun say that you wasn't an honest man when I married you."

"I was tryin' to walk straight, Tilda."

"Fur ten years you was bayin' and sellin' mewls. Abe, did you ever lie and cheat in that business?"

"Drat me, but I was so squar' that I couldn't make a livin' at it."

"For six or seven years you have been buyin' coon and skunk and woodchuck skins. Have you been a liar and a cheat?"

"No, Tilda. I could have lied once and made $3 on a b'arskin, but I shet my teeth hard agin it."

"You kin borrow a dollar of most any man, can't you?"

"Reckon so."

"And when a man has got your word he depends on it?"

"'Pears that way."

"And all this is why you've been 'lected. It's cause you've got a good name; it's cause your a squar' man. Abe, we uns is pore folks. We hain't eddecated. Planers and silks and broadcloths are not for sich as us. We squatted yere twenty years ago, and we'll stay squatted till the end. I hain't makin' the least complaint over it. I don't believe I'd care to be rich and have grand things. I'm satisfied to go right along just like this, but don't ding us down, Abe—don't do that."

"What d'ye mean, Tilda?" he asked.

"I hain't much of a reader, but I can make out 'nuff in our weekly paper to know that heaps o' men are willin' to part with their honesty to get ahead in the world. Don't part with yours. You are goin' whar you'll be tempted, but shet your teeth agin it. I'm holdin' my head high and feelin' jest as good as any one on this here mountain, not bekase we've got money, Abe, but bekase you are a squar' man. If you should lose that name you'd lose me. I'm lovin' you as much as a wife can, but I'm speakin' mighty straight when I tell you that if so much as a whisper should come back here that you had lost your squar'ness I'd walk off and starve to death in the woods rather than live on with you."

"And I wouldn't be blamin' you, Tilda," quietly replied Abe as he went out to walk about and think.

Abe Hewson went down to the capital of the state in fear and trembling. He was marked down by certain members and lobbyists as a good thing, but they gave him time to shake himself down into his place. There were axes to grind on every hand, but it was the coal men who had the largest. They wanted a charter for a railroad to run to certain undeveloped mines. It wasn't a line to build up the country and accommodate the people, but to bring coal out to market. They wanted a grant of state lands to recoup themselves.

A powerful lobby, well supplied with money and arguments, was on hand. Those who saw through the scheme and knew that it was a steal also knew that they had their hands full to fight it.

Abe was moving along slowly and trying to look ahead for pitfalls when the matter of the railroad came up and he found himself in the thick of it. He found himself in the position of many another before his time. The state employs no lobbyists to protect herself. All the argument and sophistry and money are in the hands of those who would rob her. The opponents of the railroad scheme sat down with Abe Hewson and tried to make him understand. They found him dense, but realized that he wanted to be honest. They contented themselves by telling him that it was his duty to vote against the bill. It was clear enough to Abe that day, but not so clear the next. The lobby had got after him.

Your congressional or legislative lobbyist is a smart man. He is a student of character. He is a diplomat. He is sleek and slick. In this case when it became apparent that the vote would be close the Hon. Abraham Hewson was given especial attention. Cigars and champagne met him at every turn, and on the moment Berden's voice was in his ears. "Wake up, boy! Look as if you were seeing ghosts. Isn't it, Molly? Miss McCollough, Mr. Van Holden. Did you order lunch, old chap?"

"I did," said Van Holden steadily. "It ought to be here in a moment. Mrs. Berden sit here; then the light won't be in your eyes."

He changed seats with her deftly and faced across the white tablecloth, meeting gray eyes under a wide brimmed gray hat with pale roses. There was a hint of color in the face.

"Say, Van," cried the irrepressible Berden, "you ought to hear Miss McCollough's story of the way she was 'done' by an antique dealer today promised to hold a desk or something for her."

"Don't tell on me," pleaded Miss McCollough nervously, "please, Mr. Berden."

"Oh, the joke's not on you," said Berden consolingly. "And when she went there she found a chap on hand in buying her piece a very decent looking chap, she says."

"Do make him hush, Molly." Miss McCollough's glass of water answered a declaiming and surreptitious push by flowing across the tablecloth on to Berden's knees.

Miss McCollough gasped.

"Oh, that's all right," said Berden, jumping up. He beckoned a waiter and presently resumed his seat and his story.

"Chap was awfully good looking," he rattled on. "well dressed manner—what was his manner, Molly? Oh, yes, 'the perfection of indifference and the dearest smile.'"

The quick crimson swept up to the gray hat brim, but Berden was merciless.

"She insisted on having the thing; so did he. She spoke of paying $80 for it. He let out that he was getting it for $50. I tell you those dealers are regular sharks. So she didn't take it, and listen to this, Van Robien she says she's willing to lose the furniture for the sake of the adventure says she's found her affinity."

"For pity's sake, Bobbie, hush!" cried his wife. "Can't you see you're worrying Nora? Do eat your lunch."

"Did the man get the desk, Miss McCollough?" inquired Van Holden, with courteous interest.

"Probably so. I left him there," she answered vindictively. "Mr. Berden, is the old Hotel Royal open to visitors?"

"Why don't you go back and see?" asked the man across the table meekly.

"The hotel?" she inquired, surprised.

"No; the antique store."

"Because I am not sufficiently interested!" Van Holden smiled confidently and applied himself to the salad.

With the arrival of the finger bowls the conversation by easy stages, in which Berden's new motor, the last regatta and a projected house party across the lake were discussed, came back to Miss McCollough's adventure.

"So you think the man bought your desk?" said Van Holden. "If he didn't—I'll wager he will."

Mrs. Berden arose, shaking out her skirts. "If he saw his affinity as she saw her," she laughed, "he may have bought it for her sake."

"I was thinking of that," said Van Holden.

"And some day," said Mrs. Berden teasingly, "she may sit on it before his library fire in a soft gray gown—the davenport was to be upholstered in dull green, you know."

"Don't be silly, Molly. We shall be late if you talk so long," Miss McCollough insisted feverishly.

"Well, you never can tell," said Berden. "Anything might happen, eh, Van?"

"I should think that was quite possible," said Van Holden.

"Of course," said Berden. "Come up and see us, old chap."

"We're going to motor out to west end for dinner tomorrow night. Don't you want to come?" echoed his wife.

"I do," said Van Holden earnestly. "But Miss McCollough hasn't asked me yet."

"Will you come?" asked Miss McCollough, with level defiance and something else in her gray eyes.

That day Mr. Montague sold the davenport.

Greeley's Affectation.

There was a great deal of innocence in Horace Greeley as well as not a little affectation. He was rarely seen without one trousers leg carelessly caught in the upper part of his boot, and a necktie with a bow under his ear. Once in the public room of a hotel a friend of Greeley's kindly pulled down the disarranged trousers leg and straightened the necktie. Greeley thanked him and soon after left the room. When in the course of half an hour he appeared in the street the trousers leg and the necktie had been carefully disarranged, and the man looked as negligent of things earthly as he always looked. It was part of his pose as a man of genius to wear his trousers leg and his necktie as if he had put them on in a hurry while absorbed in meditation. It was a harmless eccentricity.

The Romance of Lisbon.

Of Lisbon itself and beautiful Cintra it is scarce necessary to write. Commander Shore in his book, "The Pleasant Springs in Portugal," says: "I believe there is only one other European capital that can compare with Lisbon in point of situation and splendor of appearances, Constantinople, and the resemblance seems to have struck other travelers besides myself. Certainly when the morning mists are clinging to the shores, partly screening their beauties and lending to the scene the charm of mystery that Turner loved, Lisbon does seem like an enchanted city." What could one say more?—London Tatler.

BETTER THAN SPANKING.
Spanking does not cure children of bed wetting. If it did there would be few children that would do it. There is a constitutional cause for this. Mrs. M. Summers, Box , Notre Dame, Ind., will send her home treatment to any mother. She asks no money. Write her today if your children trouble you in this way. Don't blame the child. The chances are it can't help it.
